With beating heart and noiseless tread,
Fazz, through the window peoping.
Saw Ross, dear, with cheeks so red,
Her little pantry aweoping;
But Fazznr saw another sight.
That was at quite so pleasan;
Her mother, just to keep things right,
Was with the daughter present.

Now Farm, though but a timid lad,
As oft revealed his blushes,
A very cunning whistle had,
Clear as a singing thrush's;
Sein a soft and silvery tone,
The signal clear was sounded
Which, though by Rona quicky known,
The mother quite confounded.

And Rosa, in artiess innocence, Stopped out to fotch a me water, and Faun, for fear of accidents, The spring was but a rod or so. Just down beside the mounts fet quite an hour it took to go And got back from the fountain

The mother, frightened at the stay.
To seek her just was starting
As Farn his prudence did display,
By klasing her and parting.
What kept you so, my darling child?
Why ma, said she, with blushes.
I've had a chase so long and will
After those pretty turnshee!

Dominican Republic - Quarrel with the Cler-DOMINICAN REPUBLIC—Quarrel with the Clergy Santa Anna Victorious.—The Dominican Republic has been violently agitated with a quarrel between the Chief thereof and the Archbishon of St. Domingo.

Archbishon of St. Domingo. Archbishop of St. Domingo.

The latter refused to take the oath of fealty. He was cited to appear before Congress there for March 14th, 1853, and obeyed the summons. When in his seat, Santa Anna the. addressed him, stating that the Dominicans had gained their independence in 1844; code, and that these were the laws of the Republic, which must be obeyed and on-

The Archbishop replied that he would not renounce the prerogatives of the Church, nor swear to iniquitous laws. Again, when pressed, he said, "no! no! I take an oath TAVE just received and shall keep on hand a full to that cursed constitution, that heretical constitution!-I will exile myself first!" The President gave him promptly his passport, ordered a national vessel to bear him away, and furnished him with funds to support him. "Sir," said he to the Archbishop, "I always have been and am very religious-very Catholic. But the clergy must be kept aloof from politics. They have threatened to disturb the State; this must not be." Thereupon a decree was issued "disposing of the Archbishop."

On second thought, however, the ecclesiastic concluded to yield to the civil authority, and made a declaration of his fealty to the Republic, with great pomp, on the 4th May 5.
